In a recent press release from the Outdoor Industry Association (OIA), it was announced that OIA and Utah State University would be launching a continuing education program through an online curriculum to help prepare people to enter the outdoor industry.

Working with experts from USU Extension services to build online courses and faculty from the Outdoor Product Design & Development to provide course content, students in this fully online certificate course will learn about the circular economy, sustainability, and supply chains.

Courses will be available later in the year, but interested companies or individuals can sign up to receive a notification by email when the courses launch.

News Coverage

• USU Today
• Herald Journal (HJ News)
• Standard-Examiner
• Textile World
• Cache Valley Daily